“The Building Tomorrow’s Church conference was one of the richest and most defining experiences of my summer. ...The teaching caused me to step back and look at my own church attendance and attitude, and challenged me to pursue Christ more by becoming more a part of His body. ...I would definitely encourage any of our 18-30 age group to consider going next year!” –Rachel, Louisiana

“The Lord definitely impressed upon my heart the importance of each and every Church service and how the actions and decisions of one person affect the whole church. “Stepping outside of our comfort zone has definitely become a huge part of us since BTC. ...I know one of the guys from the group who went to BTC is going to become a member of our church. We have started a college and career group, and we've also begun deliberately searching others out in our body to see how we can be a blessing to them.” –Mary, Indiana

A Pastor's Perspective:

“The twenties are not an age that generally finds young adults well rooted in church life. In fact, statistics show that even those who grew up in church are leaving the church in large numbers during this decade of their lives. How refreshing to find a conference for young adults whose mission is worn on their sleeve: Building Tomorrow's Church. The first year it was held we offered financial assistance as a church to any of our young adults desiring to go. They came back with a contagious vision and love for the church as Christ's chosen bride. The following year they returned with a desire to faithfully use their gifts to serve in the church. And this year their burden widened to bring the gospel to the lost outside the church. Each year we have offered scholarships and each year the number attending has increased. And each year our conviction has deepened that this is some of our best invested money for the building up of Christ's church. Why not start by offering $200 to help your young adults to attend next year? I believe that both they and your church will profit from it, and if so, Christ himself will delight in the growing beauty of his church.”
